Advice for the narrator

The narrator of the story “The All-American Slurp” is very nervous about fitting in with American students. Two things she especially worries about are making mistakes and her appearance. Pretend that the narrator is a new student at your school.

Write her a letter of advice. In the letter, try to make her feel less nervous by addressing her fears about making mistakes and her appearance.

Dear friend,

A large rectangular area containing ten sets of horizontal dashed lines for writing a letter.

Yours,
