Lynching

Lynching is defined as premeditated murder by a mob, or group of people, without legal authority. Lynching is typically used as a form of social control, where one group of people attempts to intimidate another group. Lynching often combines murder with a display of public spectacle. For example, the body of the lynched person is often displayed by hanging or other methods.

In the United States, lynching of African Americans became common in the South during Reconstruction, the period right after the Civil War. Nearly 3500 African Americans were lynched in the United States between 1882 and 1968.
