WPM _____

In June 2003, the Iraq War was just three months old. U.S. soldiers gathered in the Baghdad airport for something different. They had a special visitor. It was music star Kid Rock, who played a concert just for them.

Kid Rock is just one of many celebrities who visited U.S. forces during the Iraq War.	55
Most came with the United Services Organization, or USO. The USO brings entertainment to U.S. troops serving all over the world. The USO motto is "Until Every	82
One Comes Home."

Other celebrities who performed in Iraq were rapper 50 Cent, singer Jessica Simpson, and99the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders. Comedian Stephen Colbert even taped his show, The111Colbert Report, in Iraq. To show his support of the troops and their military haircuts,126Colbert shaved his head on camera.132

Performing in Iraq could be difficult. Temperatures were sometimes 120 degrees. Iraq144was a war zone, and danger was never far away. Singer Toby Keith did many USO tours.161Once, on a flight out of Iraq, he sat next to the coffin of a fallen soldier.178

In spite of sadness and heat, many USO performers said they loved their time in Iraq.
Some came back again and again. They wanted to say "thanks" and connect with the troops. Comedian Robin Williams did several tours with the USO in Iraq and Afghanistan as well. He told a reporter, "It's some of the best audiences you'll ever get in your life."	241
